Personally identifiable information is accessible by our officers, our employees, our contractors and our agents to the extent reasonably necessary for these people to do their jobs and mission related to the operation and management of the Site and the Foundation. We may also make personally identifiable information available to others as follows

- With respect to personally identifiable information included in a submission to our catalogue raisonné, we will not disseminate such information publicly without first obtaining your permission to do so, except as otherwise specified in this Privacy Policy.

We will not disseminate other personally identifiable information publicly without first obtaining your permission to do so, except as otherwise specified in this Privacy Policy.

Aggregated data are compiled into statistical and demographic information that we may use, and may share with others, to show preferences of Site users in the aggregate, but not the preferences of any individual user. Shared aggregated data do not include a level of detail that will reasonably permit anyone to associate an individual user with the user's usage or preferences.

We may also disclose personally identifiable information to a third party if disclosure is required to comply with a subpoena, court order, and/or other legal instrument, legal proceeding or relevant law, or if there is an immediate, imminent threat to the safety of any person, the Foundation, or the Site.

3. Security: We make no representation that this site uses security methods of any kind, whether firewalls, encryption security layers or secured socket layers. No computer or network-based product exists that can provide "perfect security," we cannot guarantee nor represent that the steps we have taken, or may take, to secure your information will prevent our systems from being compromised and your information from being disclosed.
